To Bob,
for telling the story, and insisting that it be told again.

And to David, Dave, Art, Norm, and Jim for breaking the trail.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

To my wife, Anne-Marie, for encouraging me to write seriously, and giving me the space to do so.

To James Cieslak and J.T. Gill for the experience on Trail Crew.

To Brad Wroblewski for teaching me alpinism.

To the readers of various drafts who gave feedback, especially Kevin Hakl, Pat Morrow, and Don Wynn.

To Brad Bellows for the travels and the encouragement.

To Ruth Linka of Brindle & Glass publishing, for taking a chance on new authors.

To Lynne Van Luven, who helped edit the publisher's drafts.

To the triumvirate of exceptional reviewers: Marcia Delves, Katie Ives, and Joe Kadi for keeping me sane and on track through many working drafts.

To Don Gorman, of Rocky Mountain Books, for encouraging my project without boundaries.

To those who gave me a place to write when I most needed uninterrupted solitude: chez Fafard, chez Dionne, and the three houses of chez Dianne.

To the Banff Writer's Studio – all of you for the great community, and especially to Michael Helm for his expert guidance. To Edna Alford and Greg Hollingshead for your belief in the transformation of the story. And to Linda, Leigh, and Saleema for your friendship and advice.

To Bob Sandford, for your friendship, guidance, and mentoring, without which this story would not have seen the light of day.

Jerry Auld's short stories have been published in the Alpinist and in the Canadian Alpine Journal. He is a graduate of the University of Calgary and an alumnus of the Banff Writing Studio, where he worked under the direction of Michael Helm and Paul Quarrington. At the 2005 Banff Mountain Film Festival, Jerry was the co-recipient of the People's Choice Award for the independent film Sister Extreme. Jerry's knowledge of the mountains comes from full-time work on the trail crew for Kananaskis Country in the Alberta Rockies, as well as at the Banff Centre, Parks Canada, and the Banff Lodging Company. He is currently a self-employed consultant in website development and programming. Hooker & Brown is his first novel.
